Care of Fleet Post Office
New York, New York

Mr. Allen Dulles, Director
Central Intelligence Agency
2430 "E" Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Dulles:

A 63 day Polaris Patrol of our Gold Crew has just ended. When, a few days hence, the Gold Crew is relieved by the Blue, the first such cycle of Blue and Gold will be complete. After 30 days of supply and refit alongside the submarine tender, PROTEUS, at the Holy Loch, Scotland, the U.S.S. GEORGE WASHINGTON (SSB(N)-598) again will be on station. Through such future cycles Fleet Ballistic Missile Submarines will be enabled to serve two-thirds of their duty on station. While the cycle will become a routine, let not the purpose become obscure.

The FBM submarines are the most invulnerable deterrent force in existence, always ready to answer aggression with instant retaliation. This strength now serves in our country's search for peace. Under God's guidance the freedom and peace won and preserved at so great a price by those patriots for whom our ships are named will continue to bless our nation.

Captain James H. Mini, USN
Acting Superintendent
United States Naval Academy
Annapolis, Maryland

Dear Captain Mini:

Thank you very much for your letter of 20 March inviting me to address the United States Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference on 28 April.

I have been studying my schedule of commitments for next month to see if I might be able to join you. Unfortunately, I find that there just does not seem to be any possibility of my visiting the Academy on this occasion, much as I would like to do so. However, your thoughtfulness in asking me to participate in the Conference is indeed appreciated and I am sorry that my reply cannot be more favorable.

With kindest regards,

Sincerely,

Allen W. Dulles
Director

MEMORANDUM FOR: Mr. Dulles:

As you recall, when you talked to Dave Kendall recently about this Conference, you were inclined to attend. However, I am attaching the comments of [] who recommends that you decline the invitation.

Unless you really feel obligated to do this as a result of the telephone call from Dave Kendall and the letter from Admiral Carney, I recommend you decline. You are already scheduled to make talks on 17 April (San Juan), 7 May (at Mrs. Gates Lloyd's, although this will not be a hard one), 15 May (Association of General Counsels), 5 June (Navy War College), 6 June (Army War College), 9 June (Harvard Annual National Business Conference), and you are still considering whether to make the graduation address at the Nat'l War College, 9 Jun.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE DIRECTOR:

1. This memorandum contains a recommendation in Paragraph 3.
2. The attached invitation from the U. S. Naval Academy to address an inter-collegiate conference at Annapolis on April 28 is sponsored as an extra-curricular matter by the Academy. The following points are noted:
(a) only a very few of the midshipmen and Academy faculty would be present among the 325 guests to be invited; (b) the subject of the conference is "Problems of Foreign Policy in Africa and the Near East," implying that you would be expected to comment on policy matters; and (c) you are already committed to speak a few weeks later to a larger, somewhat more representative Navy audience at the Naval War College on June 5.
3. RECOMMEND: That you decline the invitation.

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT
UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY
ANNAPOLIS, MARYLAND

20 March 1961

Dear Mr. Dulles,

The United States Naval Academy will sponsor its first student conference entitled "Problems of United States Foreign Policy in Africa and the Near East" at the Naval Academy from Wednesday, 26 April, through Saturday, 29 April. This meeting will be attended by more than 120 outstanding college students from over 50 institutions of higher learning located in the eastern, midwestern, and southern parts of the United States who have a keen interest in international affairs. Enclosed are the brochure which outlines the organization, program, and details of the Conference, and a list of the senior participants of the Conference who have already accepted our invitation.

On Friday evening, 28 April, a banquet will be held. In attendance will be about 325 persons including the 120 conferees, midshipmen members of the Conference Staff, officers, faculty members, and a limited number of other guests. This banquet will be one of the highlights of the Conference.

Knowing that your experience as Director of the Central Intelligence Agency has brought you in very close contact with many problems of United States foreign affairs, you are cordially invited to deliver the major address of the Conference at the banquet on Friday evening, 28 April. I realize that your position will not permit revelation of some aspects of our foreign policy, particularly in Africa and the Near East. You may, therefore, wish to speak generally on Communism or Communism and the Cold War. If it is your desire, we will not permit a publication of your address or invite the press to the banquet.

The Naval Academy will have transportation available for you and Mrs. Dulles from Washington and return if you so wish, and accommodations will be made for you at Carvel Hall

Hotel for the night of the banquet if desired.

The Naval Academy will be singularly honored by your presence at the Conference. I hope that you will accept our invitation.

Respectfully,

James H. Mini
Captain, U. S. Navy
Acting Superintendent

NAVAL ACADEMY
FOREIGN AFFAIRS
CONFERENCE

ANNAPOLIS, MARYLAND

Information and Agenda

APRIL 26-29, 1961

The United States Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference has been planned and organized by the midshipmen of the Naval Academy Foreign Relations Club. The subject of the conference is "Problems of United States Foreign Policy in Africa and the Near East." The importance of this subject is underscored daily by the headlines of our newspapers and the awakening realization that these two areas of the world are vital to the security of the United States and the Western World.

The financial support for this conference has been generously donated by GENERAL FOODS CORPORATION.

Conference Subject

"Problems of United States Foreign Policy in Africa and the Near East."

Major Objectives

1. To analyze the forces which shape and affect the execution of United States policies in Africa and the Near East.
2. To provide an opportunity for a beneficial exchange of ideas on the conference subject by outstanding students of institutions of higher learning.
3. To examine the policies of the United States in order to ascertain whether they are consonant with the kind of an Africa and Near East that is best for the world as a whole.
4. To make recommendations in regard to what should be the policies of the United States in Africa and the Near East.

The conferees will examine the political, social, and economic conditions of Africa and the Near East and will analyze the nature of the past and contemporary policies of the United States in the light of these conditions.

Participants

More than 120 students from over 50 institutions of higher learning will attend the conference. These students will be college seniors, or especially selected juniors, who have a keen interest in the field of international relations. The panel members and round-table moderators will be outstanding academic, business, newspaper, military, and political leaders who are experts in African and Near Eastern affairs. The two major addresses of the conference will be delivered by men of national policy-making stature.

At the second plenary session of the conference a panel discussion will be conducted by authorities in military, political, and business affairs, and in public opinion. The panelists will discuss the problems and the importance of their respective fields in planning, forming, and executing the foreign policies of the United States in Africa and the Near East.

Representatives of selected foreign embassies will give presentations to the round tables on the major domestic and foreign problems of their countries.

Preparation

A bibliography of some of the current standard works on the conference topic as well as an outline of subtopics to be discussed by the round tables will be mailed to each conferee well in advance of the conference. So that the meeting will start from somewhat of a common basis, the delegates will be expected to review much of this material before arriving at the Naval Academy.

Conference Procedure

The conference will be divided into seven round tables, each consisting of 16 members. Each round-table group will study a particular geographical area as indicated below.

All sessions, generally, will be conducted on an informal basis and parliamentary procedure will not be used except when necessary.

Round Tables:

The round tables are:

1. The Northern Tier (Turkey, Iran, and Cyprus)
2. Muslim North Africa (Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia and Libya)
3. The Red Sea Nations (Yemen, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Republic, Jordan, Ethiopia, Somali Republic, Aden, and Sudan)
4. South and East Africa (Southwest Africa, Union of South Africa, Kenya, Uganda, Bechuanaland, Malagasy, Tanganyika, Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, Mozambique, and Zanzibar)
5. West Africa (Congo nations, Nigeria, Ghana, Guinea, Chad, Angola, Central African Republic, Liberia, Council of Entente, Mali, Senegal, Togo, and Mauritania)
6. The Oil Nations (Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iran, and Iraq)
7. Israel and the Arab League

Transportation - No travel reimbursement will be made to those conferees from colleges within the Washington - Baltimore Areas. Delegates who travel by public transportation will be reimbursed up to $25.00 of their round trip fare. Conferees driving privately owned automobiles will receive five cents a mile not to exceed $25.00 for the shortest round trip highway distance between their schools and Annapolis. A maximum of $25.00 will be allotted to the total number of delegates traveling in the same car.

Round-Table Chairmen, advisers, panelists, and speakers, except for those on government per diem, will be reimbursed for actual expenses, including air or first class rail and pullman accommodations, if used.

Housing - All conferees while at the conference will be housed without charge. Male students will be accommodated in the visiting team quarters of the Naval Academy Field House.

Female participants, advisers, and speakers will be lodged in Carvel Hall, which is located next to the Academy in the City of Annapolis. Senior participants receiving government per diem will pay for their own hotel accommodations.

Meals - From dinner, Wednesday, 26 April, through lunch, Saturday, 29 April, meals will be furnished to all conferees without charge. Male delegates will eat with the Brigade of Midshipmen in the dining hall.

Female conferees will have breakfast in Carvel Hall. Lunch and dinner will be served in the Severn Room of Bancroft Hall.

Senior participants will have breakfast in Carvel Hall and lunch in the Chesapeake Room of Bancroft Hall. They may have dinner at the Naval Academy Officers' Club.

Senior participants receiving government per diem will pay for their own meals.

Detailed administrative information will be mailed to NAFAC participants prior to the conference.

Since World War II United States interests in Africa and the Near East have expanded greatly. The Cold War has compelled us to weigh the advantages of the friendship of these two areas against the disadvantages to be suffered by the West if Africa and the Near East were delivered into the Communist Bloc.

The sudden and recent radical emergence of nationalism and anticolonialism has brought about a more attentive United States interest in these areas. Colonialism has been attacked from every side, and new states emerge daily as the drive toward political, economic, and social development gathers momentum. We are reminded constantly that our major allies are the colonial powers from whom many of the people of these areas seek separation. Both Africa and the Near East are areas of colonialism par excellence, and in the contemporary period of anticolonialism the prestige of the United States has suffered because of our association with colonist nations.

It should be noted, also, that because of the growing awareness that our resources are not inexhaustible, the United States is beginning to view the natural resources of Africa and the Near East in a new light. Our trade, investments, aid programs, and other involvements in these areas are growing and in some commodities have reached significant proportions. At the same time we must also be prepared to face a Eurafrica which would confederate in a complementary way their capital, skills, and resources.

Whether or not the United States takes part in the controversies of Africa and the Near East, we must reconcile ourselves to the thought that what takes place in these two areas of the world may have a decisive bearing on our future.

The problems of Africa and the Near East include some of the major contemporary problems facing the Free World today. What these problems are, how they affect the United States, and how United States foreign policy should be shaped to solve them constitute the major themes of this conference.

A significant adjunct to these major themes is the foreign policy making process in the United States. The conferees should be reminded that the major foreign policies of the United States generally are composed after due considerations have been given to the economic, political, military, sociopsychological policies; public opinion; our allies; and the over-all objectives of the nation in the fields of foreign affairs and national security.

The following outline has been included as an aid to conferees in their preparation for discussion on their round tables. The discussion will center upon an evaluation of United States foreign policy, past, present, and future, in each round table's area. From this discussion, each of the seven round tables will attempt to define objectives of our foreign policy and produce recommendations for attaining them in its particular region.

If intelligent, concrete recommendations are to result, all round table members should consider the following factors in their region of study:

- a. Geographic position
- b. Ethnic background
- c. Economic position and potential
- d. Political history
- e. Present political situation
- f. Treaties, alliances, and other foreign commitments
- g. Objectives of the USSR
- h. Basic United States national security policy
- i. United States foreign policy, present and future

The following pages contain a more detailed breakdown of these factors for each of the round table areas. These sub-topics will form the basis of the discussions in the round tables.

THE NORTHERN TIER

(Turkey, Iran, Cyprus)

1. Growth of Turkish republicanism from the days of the Young Turks and Ataturk through the increasing autocracy of Adnan Menderes to the provisional regime of Cemal Gursel.
2. Emergence of the Turkish economy from its traditional feudalism.
3. Development of Turkey's natural resources and commercial potential.
4. Importance of Turkey not merely as a buffer state athwart the Dardanelles but as an effective deterrent to direct Russian expansion in the Middle East.
5. Turkish military prowess and its effect and influence on the Syrian region of the United Arab Republic, Iran, Iraq, and on Turko-Grecian relations on Cyprus.
6. Effect and value of United States financial and military aid in Turkey.
7. Iranian social progress under the Pahlevi dynasty. (Comparison with Turkish progress during the same era may be interesting.)
8. Condition of the nationalized oil industry in Iran.
9. Further developments of Iran's considerable natural resources.
10. Future of the regime of the Shah, considering the proximity of the Soviet Union, the semi-autonomy of the Azerbaijanis, and the extensive aid of the United States.
11. Role of Cyprus in United States policies.
12. Past and present United States policies in the Northern Tier - short and long term.
13. Soviet aims and policies in the Northern Tier.
14. Recommended United States Policy.

MUSLIM NORTH AFRICA

(Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Libya)

1. Colonialism as a precursor of nationalism in North Africa.
2. Arab and European influences upon present North African turmoil.
3. Effects of the native political struggles within the North African nations upon the rise of nationalistic feeling.
4. Effects of Islam upon the economic development of the area.

5. Development of the Syro-Egyptian union.
6. Development of Saudi Arabia through the efforts of Ibn Saud.
7. Effect of the indigenous tribal organizations upon Arabia's economy and growth.
8. Effect of Arabian oil on world politics.
9. Britain and the Aden Protectorate.
10. Ethiopia, stressing its inaccessability and the effects of Italian occupation.
11. Haile Selassie's role in the development of Ethiopia.
12. Governments and economies of the separate Somali states.
13. Evolution of the Somali Republic and its prospective relationships with neighboring Ethiopia.
14. Jordan under Abdullah, stressing its relations with Britain, France, and the Arab League.
15. Jordan under Hussein.
16. Effect of the Israeli conflict upon the nations of the Red Sea area.
17. Strategic importance of the Red Sea in a world conflict.

18. Past and present United States policies.
19. Soviet aims and policies.
20. Recommended United States policy.

SOUTHERN AND EASTERN AFRICA

(South West Africa, Union of South Africa. Bechuanaland, Mozambique, Malagasy Republic, Nyasaland-Rhodesian Federation, Zanzibar, Kenya, Tanganyika, Uganda, Basutoland, Swaziland)

1. Economic, political, and cultural leadership potential of the Union of South Africa.
2. Governmental racial policies in British protected Basutoland, Swaziland, and Bechuanaland, as compared to the policies of the Union of South Africa.
3. Influence of the apartheid policy of the Union of South Africa upon the idea of racial equality in the Nyasaland-Rhodesian Federation.
4. Central African Federation.
5. Problem of Southwest Africa.
6. Mozambique, the anachronism of Eastern Africa.
7. Industrial and commercial potential of the Malagasy Republic.
8. Leadership potential of the Malagasy Republic, stressing its rapid assimilation of Western culture.
9. Changing role of the United Kingdom in its African colonies.
10. Emergence of an affluent, educated class of Negroes with effective leadership capabilities.
11. Feasibility of a union of Kenya, Tanganyika, and Uganda.
12. Position of the United States of America as an ally of the United Kingdom and of Portugal in its relations with the states of Eastern Africa.
13. Rising influence of Communist China in Eastern Africa.
14. Russian influence in Eastern Africa.
